

Flexibility, work-life balance, and trust are key reasons why isEazy obtains the Great Place To Work Certification

- The commitment of isEazy, a leading technology company in e-learning solutions, to flexible working hours, work-life balance through teleworking, and a work environment of trust and autonomy are the issues most valued by its professionals, according to the consulting firm Great Place To Work.
- The consultancy's organizational climate study reveals that 8 out of 10 workers consider isEazy a Great Place to Work, and 84% highlight camaraderie in the workplace as one of the company's outstanding values.
- More than 65% of isEazy's workforce are women, and in the management team, they represent half of the senior positions.

Madrid, November 14, 2023 – The leading technology company in e-learning solutions, isEazy, has just obtained the Great Place to Work Certification, awarded by the consulting firm Great Place to Work, a leader in identifying and certifying Great Places to Work® nationally and internationally.

This prestigious recognition in people management and business strategy is awarded annually to the best employers in the world after a diagnosis of the organizational environment, including a global employee questionnaire. isEazy has obtained the certification after passing the consultancy's evaluation with flying colors, which certifies that it has a high-trust culture capable of attracting and retaining talent.

With almost 200 employees and a commercial presence in five countries, Great Place To Work's organizational diagnosis has revealed that flexibility, work-life balance, and trust are the issues most valued by its team. Thus, 8 out of 10 workers consider isEazy a Great Place to Work, highlighting the camaraderie between employees highlighted by 84% of the workforce.

Specifically, the survey results reveal the particular importance for professionals of teleworking, flexible working hours, and the confidence to convey any concerns or queries to their managers. A high degree of satisfaction with the quality of the company's products and solutions has also been detected, highlighting the constant innovation and development of its e-learning tools.

For Miguel Valverde, CEO of isEazy: "This certification is a recognition that we are doing things very well as a team, which motivates us to continue working so that our HR policies are better every year. We aim to remain an innovative, results-oriented organization that puts people at the center, from its corporate culture to our products and services."

José Luis de Federico, founder of isEazy, points out: "We are a Great Place to Work because we promote professional development, equal opportunities, and work-life balance for our employees. It is our priority to offer a motivating work environment in which professionals grow in balance with the company and feel proud of their contribution and belonging to isEazy".
